

Fetch Audit - the brief, link by link, article by article

Window: 23:00 26 Aug to 23:00 27 Aug 2026, Melbourne. Every one of the brief's 67 links, and under each one every article it produced - 259 articles, all accounted for.

259 fetched in the window	12 sent - were in a delivered report	93 queued - go out at the next 05:00	21 held - reference and stale	133 excluded - score 0
------------------------------	---	---	----------------------------------	---------------------------

Why "fetched" and "in the report" differ: they measure different windows. The coverage line counts everything fetched in a rolling 24 hours; a morning report carries everything published in the prior calendar day that passed the gates and was not already sent. Fetched-today-published-today is queued for tomorrow, not excluded.

113 of the 133 zeros are a milestone: the first articles the newsletter route has ever delivered - the fixed keep-step processed the overnight Reuters briefings and the scorer correctly zeroed the general-market bulk. The rest are AFR lifestyle pieces. All stay in the database; none reach the client email.

The brief's 67 links, each with everything fetched under it

Each numbered entry is one hyperlink embedded in the Project Brief PDF. Beneath it: the registered source that answers for it, and every article that source produced in this window with score and disposition. Links sharing one publisher are grouped so their articles are not double-listed. "No new items this window" is not failure - most publishers do not publish daily, and the last-article date shows the source is alive. Walled publishers arrive by newsletter, and their row says so.
